Love is in the air...

Ah... the 14th February, Valentine's Day, the day of romance, red roses, cards, marriage proposals remember it's a Leap Year, ladies (!) candlelit meals, and chocolates. If the advertising is to be believed we only declare our love once a year!

I'm not sure what St. Valentine of Rome, the man who is generally remembered on 14th would think about that. According to legend, St. Valentine signed a letter "from your Valentine" to his jailer's daughter, whom he had befriended and healed from blindness, and also that he defied the emperor's orders and secretly married couples to spare the husbands from war. This year 14th February has a special significance in the life of the Church, it's also Ash Wednesday. It's the first day of Lent, a period of forty days where we commemorate Jesus' time of wilderness in the desert. It's a period of intentional self-examination and reflection of our lives, especially our spiritual life. To help that focus Lent is traditionally a time of prayer, fasting, and self-denial, and is experienced in an attitude of penitence, in sorrow and regret. So Lent is a time which, if followed in a faith sense, allows us to focus of restoring ourselves in areas which may have gone awry, especially in our relationship with God. To quote Sam Beckett in Quantum Leap, Lent can help us "to put right what once went wrong." The idea being that us working through our own wildernesses and putting it right, makes the joyful celebrations of Easter Day even sweeter! For many today Lent may be kept but not necessarily due to faith reasons but with the purpose of either starting or improving discipline to a specific venture for the benefit of ourselves and/or others around us which is so worthwhile to our humanity and well-being. If Lent has never crossed your mind before, maybe give it a whirl this year! Whether Lent is kept for the love of God, the love of ourselves, the love of others or any combination of the above, may we can recognise the powerful effect that sharing love positively has to the world. One thing's for sure though, I'd definitely share my last Rolo with you all!

God bless, Jo.
